Fashion for the future.

In four different laboratories across Great Britain scientists are already working on fashion for the future. Today we visit them and talk about their ideas

1. First we go to a small university building on the outskirts of Liverpool. Jocelyn Brown, the head of the department, informs us about their project: clothes which smell. As Brown explains, people can save on antiperspirants and perfume because the clothes produce a nice, fresh aroma.

2. The next place to visit is a charming village on the coast of Scotland. Our host here is Mandy Wilson who manages the project for the University of Glasgow. Their idea is clothes with a tiny electrical heating system to keep the wearer warm. When it is hot, you can switch the system off and clothes are cool again.

3. In Wales, scientists are busy with large sheet of paper-like material. They are producing clothes which the user can paint and decorate any way they like. What's more, it is possible to wash the clothes and paint them once again. Mary Smith, the director of the project, also stresses the fact that these clothes are environmental-friendly.

4. But the truly modern idea of clothing is waiting for us in the capital of England, London. Nick Heldon of Fashion Co. presents us with something which looks like a Roman Toga, a set of different belts, and a pair of scissors. We put the toga on and can do whatever we like with it: for example cut it very short, or put a belt on.

So, the fashion industry is getting ready to face the future. In the meantime, we should try earn more because it seems that all the ideas are rather expensive.

Baby Love

Why we want to take care of teddy bears.

The first teddy had low forehead and long limbs like real bears. But over time, they have developed more baby-like features.

A group of scientists was curious to know whether teddies changed this way because children like baby-faced bears or because adults do. They gathered together eight pairs of teddies, baby-faced bear and adult-featured one in each pair. These teddies were brown aged four and eight years old.

When a group of children were asked to choose their favourite bear from each pair of bears, the older children chose more baby-faced bears but the four-year-old preferred ones with adult features.

The scientists also asked the children what they would like to do with their favourite bear. The four-year-olds wanted to play with it, but the older children said they would like to sleep with the bear. The scientists suggest that young children do not have a specific desire to look after young and helpless until they are older.

Age of children	Baby-faced bears	Adult-faced bears	What they wanted to do with the bears
4 years	5	6	9
8 years	7	8	10
